

Lake trout by accident

While fishing for northern pike you may incidentally catch a lake trout. Lake trout are the top predators in most Yukon Lakes and important in maintaining a healthy balance with other fish species.

The lake trout population in Little Atlin is healthy, but small and vulnerable, with limited habitat available, compared to our larger lakes. The size of the lake trout here are also shown to be smaller than our current regulations are designed to protect. If you catch one by accident, follow best practises to release it safely.
